Dear Valued Customer,

Sub: Temporary fuel levy update – draught and Bag-in-Box (BiBs)

With instability continuing in the Middle East, economic and fuel impacts continue to flow from the conflict.

Unfortunately, the Australian Diesel Terminal Gate Price (TGP) has climbed back to such a level that we need to increase the existing temporary fuel levy for draught and bag-in-box products. Therefore, the temporary fuel levy will continue to apply to draught and bag-in-box products and will return to the original rate introduced in May 2026.

The revised temporary fuel levy will apply to products dispatched from 2 November 2026.

As we did previously, we will continue to monitor fuel prices and will remove the levy once diesel prices stabilise and we have recovered our increased fuel-related costs.

We have again calculated the amount of the levy having regard to:

- The change in the publicly available Diesel Terminal Gate Price; and
- Any direct increase in costs from other suppliers related to the fuel price.

The levy will apply as follows:

Arranged Delivery

- Kegs: $2.20 per keg
- Bag-in-Box: $0.30 per carton

Inward Linehaul (“will call”)

- Kegs: $1.10 per keg
- Bag-in-Box: $0.15 per carton

As we have previously advised, the levy will be limited to recovering the additional cost of diesel we have incurred, and other fuel-related costs passed on from other suppliers.

The temporary fuel levy previously introduced on packaged products in July, remains unchanged and will continue to apply.

We recognise this will impact customers differently and we are enormously grateful for your ongoing support of our brands.

If you have any questions about the temporary fuel levy, please don’t hesitate to contact your Asahi Beverages representative.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Phan
